Dedication

Tomorrow what we become depends on whom we have known and how they have formed us today. We, the class of 1972, dedicate our yearbook to Somerville Parker, counsel, guide, and friend. He, as much as anyone at Landon, has formed us to what we are now while at the same time shaping the prospects of our growth to come. He has resolved the sometimes conflicting roles he serves, insisting that discipline is functional to education while still maintaining personal concern for the individual student. The manifest qualities of his judgement, temperament and understanding have influenced us because they have become so much a part of our lives today that tomorrow we not only will remember, but will live them as well.

And Tomorrow

Yonder see the morning blink:
The sun is up and up must I,
To wash and dress and eat and drink
And look at things and talk and think
And work, and God knows why.

Oh often have I washed and dressed
And what's to show for all my pain?
Let me lie abed and rest:
Ten thousand times I've done my best
And all's to do again.

"PACKED" STANDS AT HOME FOOTBALL GAME

by ERIC CORWIE (Football, contd.

New Attitudes in School
In the Lower School, the interest in and enthusiasm for football has remained the same throughout the past few years. A new system of competition has helped the sport to continue to flourish. The set-up involves intramural games between two leagues (the AFL and the NFL) with five teams each. These teams, which are divided into equal weights, play up to three times a week. Records and standings provide necessary competition, but the frolicking, unbusinesslike nature of Lower School football has kept the enthusiasm from waning.

Football in the Middle School, according to Maclear Jacoby, principal, is "booming". Games with other schools at the seventh and eighth grade levels are increasingly hard to find. However, 90 out of 120 students are playing football on a voluntary basis. The students are encouraged to play, but no pressure is applied if one wants to play tennis or volleyball. There are now three teams in the Middle School; for each participating Landon occupied its main cause of this if new interests is football itself—not just the game per se, but those specifics involved with it—size, time, and purpose. Lack of interest has narrowed the choice of teams to only two, Varsity and Junior Varsity, and the opportunity to play is narrowed, particularly for those not physically suited for the game. Many begin to realize their comparative lack of size and question the worth of their getting mauled on the field. Besides the size difference, the demands on one's time become more pressing; heavy homework loads, increased pressure for extracurricular involvement, plus in Fifth and Sixth Form, the headaches of college hunting, all combine to make time for an Upper Schooler a particularly precious commodity. With all these obstacles, the student uses his ever maturing intellect to question the overall purpose of football and, in cost cases, he chooses to end his relationship with the sport on a competitive level.

Reactions to Demise

Reactions to the apparent demise of football vary. Many be-participate, physically and mentally," that there is "no comparison with any other sport." "Football, states Mr. Banfield, "combines the emotional and spiritual with the physical." Those who favor the football program believe that football accomplishes this goal as no other sport can.

A large group in the Landon community believes that the "fall" of football at Landon is constructive. The feeling is that the sport has been overemphasized for many years, and only recently have grades, activities and other non-athletic interests come to their proper position. Neal Nordlinger, starting football player as a junior who decided not to play his senior year, feels "not playing football has given me the time to get involved in activities which I would not have been able to participate in if I'd played. This means a lot more to me than playing football." This group believes that new students can concentrate on more important as-

LACK OF FOOTBALL

National REFLECT DEMISE
Mr. Banfield is afraid [football] will die out and then there will eventually be a resurgence of the values that were once held highly." Mr. Reames agrees: "... we're at the bottom of a cycle—of athletes are going to change and football is going to come up."

Honor Code

- I. Honorable conduct is expected of all students at all times.
- II. Cheating, stealing, and lying are the three breaches of honor that concern all students.
- III. A student who has observed any of the above infractions is obligated to pursue one of the following courses of action:
 - A. He may bring the matter to the attention of his Student Council representatives. They will in turn confer with the president of the Student Council and, if deemed appropriate, the party in question. The president of the Student Council will decide upon possible further action.
 - B. He may request, and later verify, that the observed violator turn himself in to the Student Council.
- IV. Any student reported by a master must appear before the Student Council in formal session.
- V. It is a student's responsibility as an honorable individual to conform to these provisions. If he should not, he is guilty of violating the honor of his classmates and is liable for punishment to be determined by the Student Council.

Remember thee?

Ay . . . while memory holds a seat
 In this distracted globe. Remember thee?
 Yea, from the table of my memory
 I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
 All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past
 That youth and observation copied there.

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you,
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting too; . . .
If you can dream — and not make dreams your masters
If you can think and not make thoughts your aim;
If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two imposters yet the same; . . .
Yours is the earth and everything that's in it,
And — which is more — you'll be a man, my son!

St. Stephen

St. Stephen with a rose,
In and out of the garden he goes,
Country garland in the wind and the rain,
Wherever he goes the people complain.

Stephen prosper in his time
Well he may and he may decline.
Did it matter? Does it now?
Stephen would answer if he only knew how.

Wishing well with a golden bell,
Bucket hanging clear to Hell,
Hell halfway twixt now and then
Stephen fill it up and lower down
And lower down again.

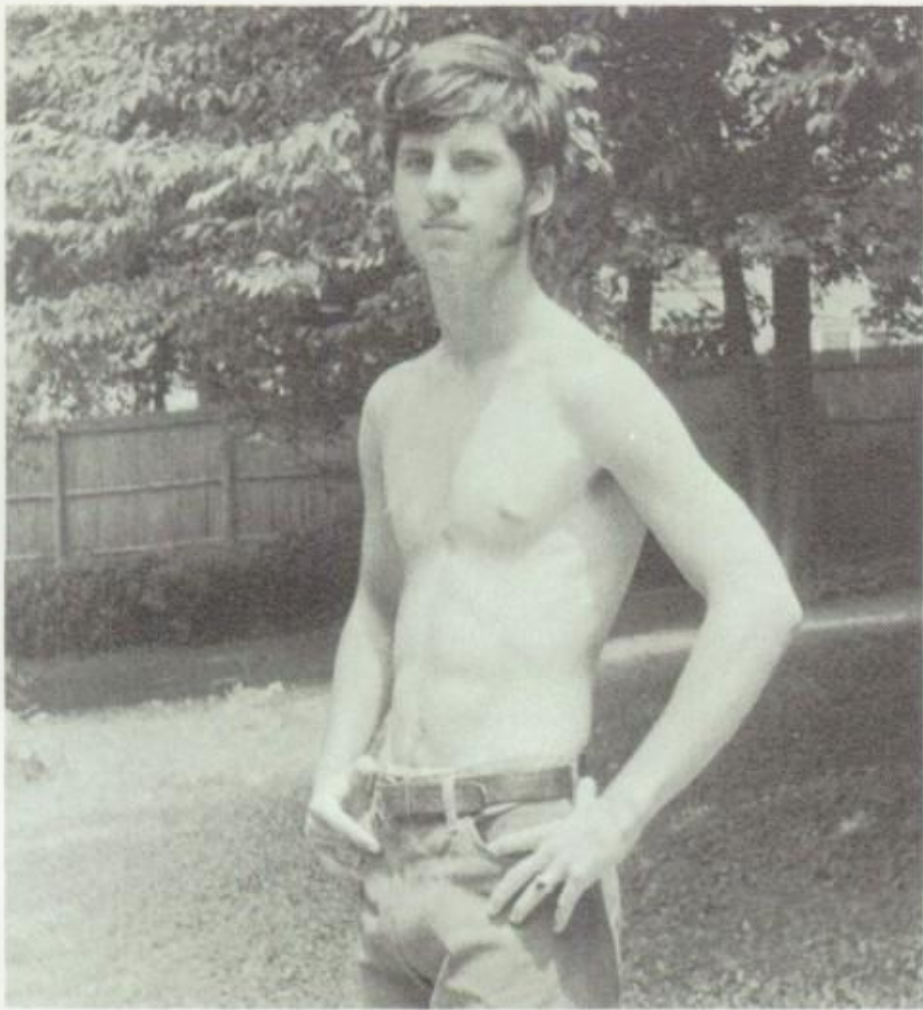

Lady finger dipped in moonlight
Writing "What For?" across the morning sky.
Sunlight splatters dawn with answers,
Darkness shrugs and bids the day goodbye.

Speeding arrow, sharp and narrow,
What a lot of fleeting matters you have spurned.
Several seasons, with their treasons,
Wrap the babe in scarlet call it your own.

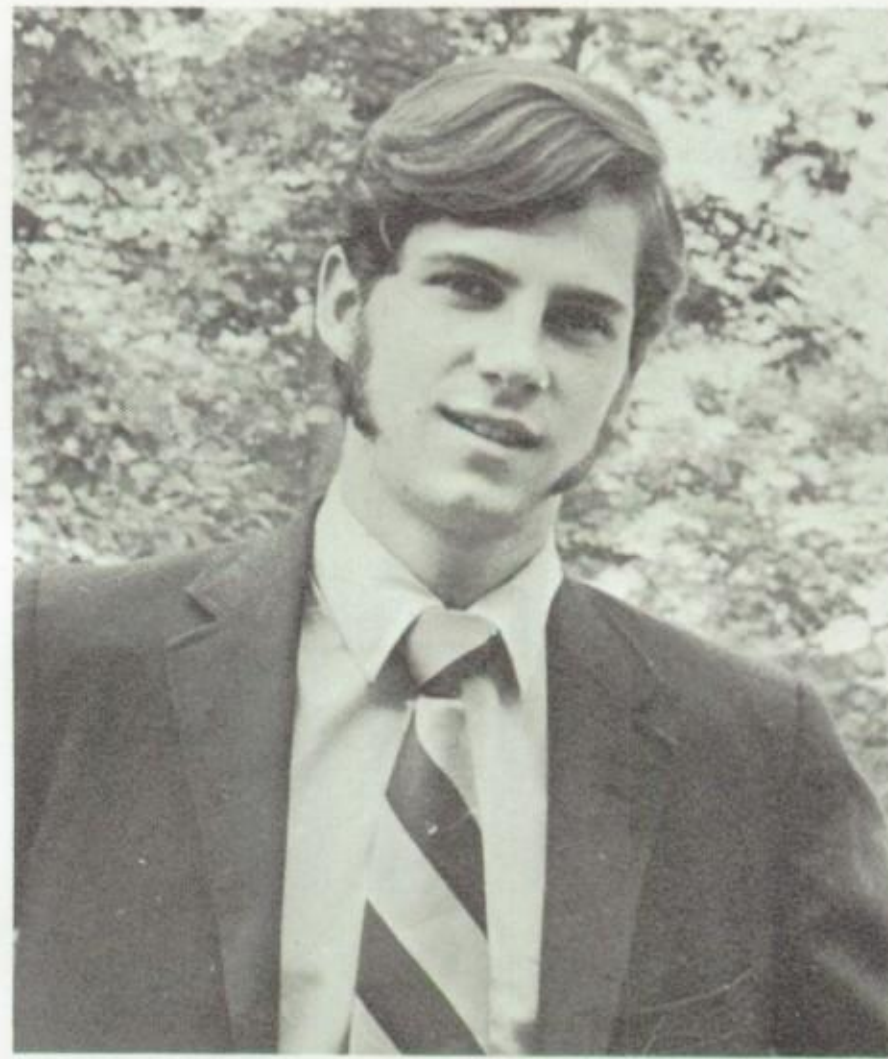

Did he doubt or did he try?
Answers a plenty in the bye and bye.
Talk about your plenty, talk about your ills,
One man gathers what another man spills.

St. Stephen will remain
All he's lost he shall regain.
Seashore washed by the suds and the foam,
Been here so long he's got to calling it home

Fortune comes a-crawling, calliope woman
Spinning that curious sense of your own.
Can you answer? Yes, I can,
But what would be the answer to the answer man

When the rain comes tumbling down
In the country or the town
All good little girls and boys
Stay at home and mind their toys.
Robert thought — "No when it pours,
It is better out of doors."
Rain it did, and in a minute
Bob was in it.
Here you see him, silly fellow
Underneath his red umbrella.

What a wind! Oh! how it whistles
Through the trees and flowers and thistles!
It has caught his red umbrella;
Now look at him, silly fellow,
Up he flies
To the skies
No one heard his screams and cries
Through the clouds the rude wind bore him,
And his hat flew on before him.

Soon they got to such a height
They were nearly out of sight!
And the hat went up so high
That it really touched the sky
No one ever yet could tell
Where they stopped, or where they fell;
Only, this one thing is plain,
Bob was never seen again.

Does it dry up
Like a raisin in the sun?

Like a syrupy sweet?

Maybe it just sags
Like a heavy load.

Or does it explode?

I believe:

That most people have forgotten how really good it feels to feel really good and that the most important thing we can do is to remind them, by example, of what they have forgotten.

That to appreciate freedom you have to be free. You can tell how free a man is by the amount of respect he has for freedom.

That "total freedom" and "total peace of mind" are two ways of saying the same thing, and you can have it as soon as you want it, but you have to learn how to get it.

That a peaceful world means a world filled with peaceful people, and anyone who uses or justifies the use of violence is delaying the coming of a peaceful world.

That man is the highest form of life on this planet, and he should act like it: STAY HIGH!

Outside the Nashville city limits
A friend and I did drive
On a day in early winter
I was glad to be alive.
We went to see some friends of his
Who lived upon a farm
Strange and gentle country folk
Who wished nobody harm
Fresh-cut sixty acres
Eight cows in the barn,
But the things that I remember
On that cold day in December
Was that my eyes they did brim over
As we talked.
In the slowest drawl I've ever heard

The man said come with me
If y'all wanna see the prettiest place
In all of Tennessee
He poured us each a glass of wine
And a walking we did go
Along fallen leaves and crackling ice
Where a tiny brook did flow
He knew every inch of land
And Lord he loved it so
But the things that I remember
On that cold day in December
Was that my eyes were brimming over
As we walked

He set me down upon a stone
Beside a running spring
He talked in a voice so soft and clear
Like the water I heard sing.
He said we searched quite a time
For a place to call our own
There was just me and Mary John.
And now I guess we're home
I looked at the ground and wondered
How many years they each had roamed
And hard I do remember
On that day in late December
How my eyes kept running over
As we talked as we walked
And standing there with outstretched arms
He said to me you know
I can't wait till the heavy storms
Cover the ground with snow
And there on the pond the water-cress
Is all that don't turn white
When the sun is high you squint your eye
And look at the hills so bright
And nodding his head and my friend said
"It seems like overnight
That the leaves come out so tender
At the turning of the winter."
I thought the skys they would brim over
As we talked.

The browns, reds and golds of autumn lie in gutter, dead.

"But we can perhaps remember, even if only for a time, that those who live with us are our brothers, that they share with us the same short moment of life, that they seek as we do nothing but the chance to live out their lives in purpose and happiness, winning what satisfaction and fulfillment they can.

Surely this bond of common faith, this bond of common goals, can begin to teach us something. Surely we can learn at least to look at those around us as fellow men. And surely we can begin to work a little harder to bind up the wounds among us and to become in our own hearts brothers and countrymen once again.

The answer is to rely on youth, not a time of life but a state of mind, a temper of the will, a quality of imagination, a predominance of courage over timidity, of the appetite for adventure over the love of ease. The cruelties and obstacles of this swiftly changing planet will not yield to the obsolete dogmas and outworn slogans; they cannot be moved by those who cling to a present that is already dying, who prefer the illusion of security to the excitement and danger that come from the most peaceful progress."

Go placidly amid the noise and haste, and remember what peace there may be in silence. As far as possible without surrender, be on good terms with all persons. Speak your truth quietly and clearly; and listen to all others, even the dull and ignorant; they too have their story.

Avoid loud and aggressive persons, they are vexations to the spirit. If you compare yourself with others, you may become vain and bitter; for always there will be greater and lesser persons than yourself. Enjoy your achievements as well as your plans.

Keep interested in your own career, however humble; it is a real possession in the changing fortunes of time. Exercise caution in your business affairs; for the world is full of trickery. But let this not blind you to what virtue there is; many persons strive for high ideals; and everywhere life is full of heroism.

Be yourself. Especially do not feign affection. Neither be cynical about love; for in the face of all aridity and disenchantment it is perennial as the grass.

Take kindly the counsel of years, gracefully surrendering the things of youth. Nurture strength of spirit to shield you in sudden misfortune. But do not distress yourself with imaginings. Many fears are borne of fatigue and loneliness. Beyond a wholesome discipline be gentle with yourself.

You are a child of the universe, no less than the trees and the stars; you have a right to be here. And whether or not it is clear to you, no doubt the universe is unfolding as it should.

Therefore be at peace with God, whatever you conceive Him to be, and whatever your labors and aspirations, in the noisy confusion of life keep peace with your soul.

With all its sham, drudgery, and broken dreams, it is still a beautiful world. Be careful. Strive to be happy.

'pick up a handful of pebbles'

(a legend)

One night in ancient times, three horsemen were riding across a desert. As they crossed the dry bed of a river, out of the darkness a voice called, "Halt!"

They obeyed. The voice then told them to dismount, pick up a handful of pebbles, put the pebbles in their pockets and remount.

The voice then said, "You have done as commanded. Tomorrow at sun-up you will be both glad and sorry." Mystified, the horsemen rode on.

When the sun rose, they reached into their pockets and found that a miracle had happened. The pebbles had been transformed into diamonds, rubies, and other precious stones. They remembered the warning. They were both glad and sorry—glad they had taken some, and sorry they had not taken more.

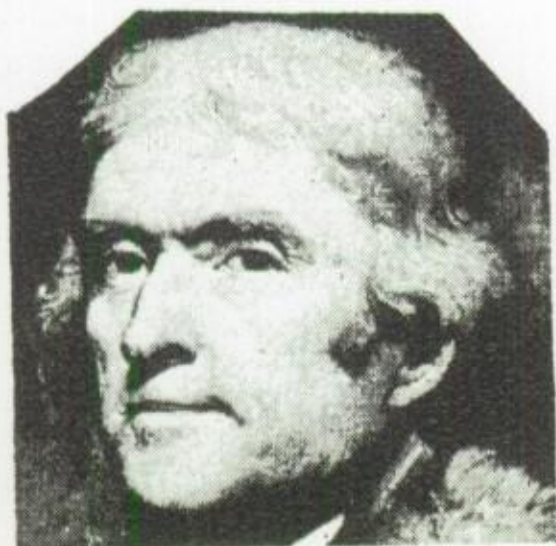

"Glad they had taken some, and sorry they had not taken more." Isn't this the story of LIFE INSURANCE?

Expanding satellite pathways

COMSAT and its 79 partners in INTELSAT operate a global system of satellites over the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian oceans that has changed world communications patterns and potentials.

Little Early Bird established the first satellite pathway between North America and Europe in June 1965. Since then, more than 150 satellite pathways have been added to provide direct lines of communication among earth stations in some 35 countries.

COMSAT operates seven U. S. stations in the worldwide network of ground terminals which will grow to include more than 60 countries within the next three years.

Early Bird started a new communications era. Now high quality phone calls flow easily among a growing number of nations which found it difficult to communicate. "Live via Satellite" flashes on TV screens regularly from countries around the world, and even the moon. Computers are talking to computers with increasing regularity.

Now COMSAT proposes to bring the benefits of satellite technology to the public for communications within the United States.

COMSAT, a privately owned corporation, has proposed a multipurpose satellite system that would meet the domestic needs of all U. S. communications users, large and small. This would bring another new communications advance to the people of the United States.

Government Services continued to achieve major gains in assets, savings accounts and loans outstanding for calendar year 1971. Total assets as of December 31, 1971 were $53,455,567, up 113% from $25,106,490 a year earlier. Total savings accounts were $38,081,617, up 104% from $18,643,116 the prior year. Total mortgage loans outstanding as of December 31, 1971 increased 114% to $47,790,054 from $22,375,481 the year before. Total net worth as of December 31, 1971 was $2,960,886, up 169% from $1,100,594 as of December 31, 1970.

1969	.19
1967	.21

This continued growth is a measure of acceptance by the Government Community of the many savings benefits offered by Government Services. Among these are a generous interest rate of 6% on regular passbook savings accounts, which enables many small savers to obtain the maximum investment yield on their funds. Other important advantages are the absence of any certificate restrictions, ninety-day notice rules, or minimum deposit requirements. An important feature has been availability of retroactive interest, allowing funds received by the 20th of the month to earn from the first.

Major lending programs of the company have brought the company a large volume of home loans guaranteed by the U.S. Government under Veterans Administration and Federal Housing Administration programs. A major portion of such loans assists Federal employees and active duty military officers. Substantial financing for construction of new homes in Metropolitan Washington Area has been in line with Government objectives of increasing homebuilding during the past year.
